

Making a ruling to mandate copy protection in HDTV receivers will prevent the creation of TIVO-like devices compatible with HDTV, removing my right to time-shift my viewing of broadcast television. The immediate effect of this will be for me to *not* invest in new television equipment. Long term it will likely make a criminal out of most Americans, like so many other ill-advised government regulations designed to prop up failing business models do.